African and Black Diaspora: an international journal

African and Black Diaspora: an international journal is the first academic journal that directly addresses the needs of scholars working in the important field of African Diaspora studies. It will advance the analytical and interpretative discourses that constitute this distinctive interdisciplinary study of the determinatised and transnational nature of the African and Black Diaspora. Beyond essentialist modes of theorizing, the journal will locate the movement of African descended populations (geographical, cultural, social, political and psychological) in the context of globalized and transnational spaces by emphasizing the centrality of African and Black Diaspora.

African and Black Diaspora

African Identities: Journal of Economics, Culture and Society

Editors: Abebe Zegeye, University of South Africa, South Africa and Pal Ahluwalia, University of California, San Diego, USA and The University of South Australia, Australia

Volume 8, 4 issues per year
Print ISSN 1472-5843, Online ISSN 1472-5851

African Identities provides a critical forum for the examination of Africam and diasporic expressions, representations and identities. The aim of this journal is to open up various horizons in the field: to encourage the development of theory and practice in a wider spread of disciplinary approaches; to promote conceptual innovation and to provide a venue for the entry of new perspectives. The journal focuses on the myriad of ways in which cultural production creates zones of profound expressive possibilities by continually generating texts and contexts of reflexive import. With an emphasis on gender, class, nation, marginalisation, ‘otherness’ and difference, the journal explores how African identities, either by force of expediency or contingency, create layered terrains of (ex)change, a decentre dominant meanings, paradigms and certainties. Important questions about the meanings of Africanness, ‘post-coloniality’ and syncretics, for example, provide conceptual frameworks within which to structure the critical analysis of African cultural production and axis of engagement with popular culture.

The journal aims to:
• Deal with practice and policy in a thoughtful and critical way;
• Present empirical material in a way that considers theoretical issues (in addition to implications for policy and practice, given the contested nature of both ‘ethnicity’ and ‘health’);
• Address the methodological problems that face both qualitative and quantitative studies in multi-cultural societies.

The Journal of Postcolonial Writing is devoted to the study of literature written in English and published throughout the world. In particular it aims to explore the interface between the postcolonial writing of the modern global era and the economic forces of production which increasingly commodify culture.

The Journal of Postcolonial Writing interrogates assumptions underpinning postcolonial theory and its liberationist rhetoric by focusing upon the discursive practices informing contemporary writing and the impact of the global, the regional, and the local upon each other. Our concern is with the conditions under which a resistant ‘global imagination’ comes into being.

Postcolonial Studies is the first journal specifically aimed at publishing work which explores the various facets - textual, figurual, spatial, historical, political and economic - of the colonial encounter, and the ways in which this encounter shaped the West and non-West alike. A growing academic literature recognises that the colonial encounter was a seminal event in the history of both the West and the non-Western world, shaping culture and literature, politics and history. From being the provenance of the ‘area studies’ scholar, it has become the site of numerous investigations from many disciplines, as well as a theoretical perspective from which to view a variety of concerns. ‘Postcolonialism’ is the name which such investigations have acquired, and Postcolonial Studies provides a forum for them.

Patterns of Prejudice provides a forum for exploring the historical roots and contemporary varieties of social exclusion and the demonization or stigmatisation of the Other. It probes the language and construction of ‘race’, nation, colour, and ethnicity, as well as the linkages between these categories. It encourages discussion of issues at the top of the public policy agenda, such as asylum, immigration, hate crimes and citizenship. As none of these issues are confined to any one region, Patterns of Prejudice maintains a global optic, at the same time as scrutinizing intensely the history and development of intolerance and chauvinism in the United States and Europe, both East and West.

South Asian Diaspora
Editor: Ajaya K. Sahoo, University of Hyderabad, India
Volume 2, 2 issues per year
Print ISSN 1943-8112; Online ISSN 1943-8184
The South Asian Diaspora, shaped by dispersions of people, goods, ideas and beliefs that flowed from and through the Indian Subcontinent is currently one of the world’s largest diasporas. India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Bhutan and the Maldives all anchor a sense of home for people who have moved outside the region through the centuries. These territories evoke emotional, social, political, economic, cultural and literary affiliations as well which find expression in multiple ways. The diaspora is also marked by struggles over meanings and tensions both amongst the diasporics and with people in the countries where the diasporics now inhabit. In South Asian Diaspora we aim to explore some of the issues that the South Asian diaspora presents for the contemporary world. www.tandf.co.uk/journals/rapid

Since the first issue was published in 1984, Wasafiri has always opened minds and crossed literary worlds. The magazine remains key in mapping new literary landscapes and offering the best of contemporary international writing today, consistently featuring Britain’s diverse cultural heritage whilst also highlighting the vast range of worldwide diasporic and migrant literature. ‘Wasafiri’, the KiSwahili word for travellers, captures our ethos: to travel the world via the word to extend and challenge the established boundaries of literary culture. Wasafiri gives particular prominence to those whose literary and historical concerns do not necessarily fit within the confining rubrics of any one particular movement, tradition, or culture. One of the UK’s first publications to have provided a sustained outlet for new writing, it has contributed to the emergence of many new established voices and offers a dynamic context for dialogue and critical debate. As such, Wasafiri provides a unique forum for those keen to explore the geographies and contours of new and emerging literary worlds.

Young People, Class and Place

Edited by Robert MacDonald, University of Teesside, UK, Tracy Shildrick, University of Teesside, UK and Shane Blackman, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK

Under the weight of apparently growing consumer affluence, globalisation and postmodern social theory, many have proclaimed the declining significance of social class and place to young people’s lives – and for social science. Drawing upon new, empirically grounded, theoretically innovative studies, this volume begs to differ. This book was based on a special issue of Journal of Youth Studies.
